

Planning the Trip:

The trip preparation usually happens before traveling and is done at home, office, etc. through using different devices.

On the Way:

The main goal of transit is getting to destination by driving, using public transportation or taking a flight. While on the way, people usually prefer to make the most out of their transit time.

During the trip:

Once getting to the destination, it is the time to get ready for planned activities by checking the direction, weather, a place to eat, and more through using different devices and applications.

Getting ready:
Before going on my trip, I check the direction, weather, attractions and activities, and a place to stay.

At Home:

I look for information when I'm at home.

At the office:

I do a lot of my planning at work on my laptop as I get a lot of free time.

... While I am free:

I look for hotels when I'm free. At home or at work, or when I'm watching TV.

Devote a Specific time:

I allow a specific time for planning. I use my laptop to plan as I found my phone distracting.

Getting to the destination and Navigation:

I travel by car if it's close by or by a bus/ flight if it's an overnight trip.

I drive everywhere as it gives me more control over my travel and public transport isn't good.

I use Uber to get to the airport.

I use Delta airline to get to my destination.

I use Google Maps/Waze on my phone to navigate to my destination, while my husband uses a Garmin.

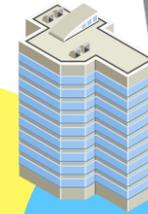

I check for traffic updates through the WTOP radio station.

Using Transit Time:

I will explore a place in the layover time I have waiting for the next flight at the airport.

Continue planning the trip:

I google possible activities I could do at the destination.

Checking the Weather:

I check the weather on app every day, to decide what to do on that day.

Looking for Activities:

I look for museums, art galleries, and parks on my phone and through google search.

I check Instagram postings to find interesting places around.

I look up my premade lists to see where to go.

Dining :

I look for food places before every meal through google/yelp search on my phone; They have to be nearby and open; then I check the reviews.

I ask people in the area, for places to eat at, or I just walk around, exploring the street food.

I go to local cafes, but if they aren't there I prefer to cook my own food.

Traveling around:

I use Uber to travel around.

If the weather is good, I will book and ride around on scooters.
